

DELTA CHI

FRATERNITY

Chapter Finances

2023-2024

It is always important for every Delta Chi chapter to consider how to better prepare for the future. Financially, it is the responsibility of our members to manage their chapter finances to support their members during hardship, meet their international financial commitments, and allow the brotherhood experience to continue, despite unforeseen circumstances. This guide is meant to support chapter "D"s, executive boards, and Advisory Boards of Trustees (ABT) to financially manage the upcoming academic year and beyond.

Membership and Local Dues

Just as recruitment and brotherhood drive the legacy of Delta Chi, so do your membership and local chapter dues. Finances are part of the Delta Chi experience to ensure your chapter and your future brothers will have the same opportunities. Meeting the financial obligations of membership and creating a positive experience for all brothers is essential to the long lasting bond of Fraternity.

Fraternity Membership Dues/Fees

The total owed for the 2023-2024 academic year to the International Fraternity is $280 (on average) for each initiated member in the fall, $216 (on average) for each initiated member in the spring, and $376 (one time, on average) for all Associate Members. This covers membership dues, housing initiatives, insurance, and initiations. Below is the breakdown of semester Fraternity Dues, not included is the chapter assessment fee that is billed per chapter each January.

 INITIATED MEMBER DUES FALL 2023	$78	+	$10	+	$192	=	$280

Local Chapter Dues

Local Delta Chi chapter dues should be adjusted and considered in the budgeting process to prepare for the current and upcoming academic years. The chapter is responsible for all bills and remaining current with International accounts. Additionally, chapters should consider additional expenses that are campus specific like billing agency fees, a Fraternity and Sorority Life administration fee, or an Interfraternity Council (IFC) fee. Every campus is different and each chapter is responsible for upholding all financial obligations for successful operations.

Housing/Facilities

Local Delta Chi house corporations are responsible to manage and support the expenses of all housing and facility operations. This includes rent, utilities, meal expenses, etc. All questions on housing/facility fees should be directed to your local house corporation boards.
